TAYLOR QUIGLEY & BRUCE GLAZER

June 15, 2019

The Peninsula Chicago

THE COUPLE Bruce Glazer and Taylor Quigley met in college on a spring break trip to Acapulco, Mexico. For Bruce, it was love at first sight. "That's the girl I'm going to marry," he told his friends at the time. His forecast proved right: Seven years later, he proposed to Taylor inside the sculptural wood pavilion near the Lincoln Park Zoo.

THE DETAILS The couple chose The Peninsula Chicago because they love the Grand Ballroom's view of Michigan Avenue, John Hancock Center and the Water Tower. "But for the ceremony," Taylor says, "we had the drapes closed, for a romantic setting with chandeliers and candlelight." The Jewish ceremony was held underneath a traditional chuppah and incorporated personal vows, along with many family heirlooms.

THE PARTY Guests dined on filet mignon and Chilean sea bass beneath soaring centerpieces filled with dreamy pink roses, white hydrangeas and cascading greenery. The couple cut a five-tier cake, and a wedding portrait was painted live by Rosemary Fanti. The glamorous evening ended with an afterparty in the hotel's Avenues Ballroom, where guests were entertained by electric violinist Kat V. —Liz Logan

Clockwise from top: The color palette of blush, sandstorm, gold, ivory and greenery "made A Midsummer Night's Dream my reality," says the bride of her fairy-tale vibe; HMR Designs created towering table centerpieces of blush, ivory and white roses, hydrangeas, waxflowers and more, and the tablecloths had a shimmery finish; artist Rosemary Fanti painted the couple's first dance as it was happening.
